About the theme of webinar

Today's classroom is a global entity and unless appropriately addressed, issues of cultural diversity have the potential to severely diminish the success of even most dedicated teachers and promising students. In order to promote an atmosphere that enables all students to be successful in learning English in the English as a second language class room, it is important that each student feels safe, respected and appreciated. In today's diverse and multicultural climate, this sensitivity has not been given importance. If a teacher is culturally insensitive to his students, the students may feel disrespected and misunderstood and apprehension towards the teacher may develop. In order to foster a successful class room and a productive learning-environment, a teacher must attempt to establish some kind of connection with his/her students. By recognizing and celebrating cultural diversity, the teacher can significantly improve students experiences and the ability to learn English
